NOTED ACTRESS TO SPEAK HERE

Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale
Booked for Address in Court
House Next Week. Suffragists
Need not Neglect their Homes.

Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale, actress, authoress and lecturer, will speak here on Woman Suffrage next Thursday, October 21, at the Court House. She will appear under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Woman's Suffrage Association.

Mrs. Hale, who is a niece of the titled English actor, Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, won a name for herself as an actress before her marriage in 1910 to Swinburne Hale, a New York lawyer. She appeared with Sir Henry Irving in "Robespierre" and acquired a splendid reputation as an interpreter of Shakespearean roles with her uncle, Sir Johnston. After her marriage, however, she left the stage to devote her talents to a cause she had long held dearer than playing even Shakespeare's heroines.

The phase of suffrage she has studied most and which she advocates especially concerns the safeguarding of Mothers' Rights. Mrs. Hale is herself a mother and furnishes convincing proof of the fact that a woman can have both a home and a career if she wants to. Her home is the kind of home they make pictures of on Christmas cards—with lights shining through the windows onto the snow, and diamond panes and chintz curtains, a hearth with a dog and pussy cat in the fireglow, and babies upstairs, a happy husband and all the other comforts that make a home real.

The babies are Sanchia, Rosemary and Clemency, the latter two, twin cherubs who celebrated their first birthday a couple of months ago with a party to which half a dozen other suffrage babies were invited.

That it is perfectly possible to have such a home and such babies, as well as a profession, is one of the things that Mrs. Hale is proving. Interviewed recently on how she managed to do it, she said:

"Any normal woman can do two things successfully, but not three. She simply must choose those she most loves. I chose my home and my profession, and allowed the social activities to go. Some might prefer society to a profession. Some women on the other hand might prefer household tasks to any outside work. I would consider that equivalent to a profession, provided she assumed all her household labor.

"Home means so much that I would counsel young people to plan for it while life and love are young. Do not wait and wait for the man's earnings to be ample. The wife can help and should help. Their home can then gradually grow and be the happier for the mutual building. Home and babies need not end woman's other work. I pay women the compliment of knowing that they can do two things and do them well."

Mrs. Hale has disproven the idea that where there is suffrage there can be no romance. She first met her husband at a suffrage meeting, he being a member of the Executive Committee of the Men's League of the State of New York.

GOES TO PENITENTIARY

Slayer of Stepfather Gets Sentence in Court at Frederick.

Earl Thomas, known as Earl Harp, against whom a jury brought in a verdict of manslaughter in Frederick County Court, upon an indictment charging him and his mother, Florence Harp, with the murder of his stepfather, Charles V. Harp, at his home, on May 17, was on Tuesday sentenced to the Maryland Penitentiary for a term of six years.

A petition, signed by nine of the jurors, who sat on the case, was handed to the court, beseeching the clemency of the court, claiming that young Harp was a good boy, and that this was the first time that any charge had ever been brought against him. The maximum term for manslaughter in Maryland is ten years.

The mother was acquitted.

COUNCIL AGAIN TALKS OF ROADS

Met Tuesday Night and will Convene again Friday Evening to Discuss Coming Street Paving in Gettysburg. Other Business.

In order to ascertain just where the State Highway Department stands in its attitude toward the material to be used in the paving of Chambersburg and Baltimore streets, the town council at its adjourned meeting Tuesday evening appointed John D. Keith Esq. to go to Harrisburg and confer with the heads of that department.

Council will meet again on Friday to hear his report and, if it is satisfactory, final action on the ordinance will then be called for. Tuesday evening's decision followed the receipt of a letter by J. Donald Swope Esq., solicitor, from W. D. Uhler, chief engineer of the department, in which he said:

"I wish to acknowledge receipt of your letter addressed to the State Highway Commissioner, in reference to the type of pavement for the proposed State-aid road in Gettysburg Borough, Adams County, and would advise that it is the understanding of this Department that your borough desires either sheet asphalt or asphaltic concrete construction.

"For your information, however, I would say that in advertising for alternative bids, it is the policy of this Department to award the contract to the lowest bidder for the work, irrespective of the type, as we take the position that in asking for alternative proposals on two or more different types of construction, no preference should be shown after the opening of the bids."

Council felt that this was not sufficiently clear and in order to learn the attitude of the Department on the nature of the bids to be asked for, the character of the material to be used, and also their attitude on the ordinance now before council for final passage, the visit of Mr. Keith was authorized.

At Tuesday evening's meeting, which was an adjournment of the regular October session, council directed the secretary to order twelve rubber coats for the Fire Company, the sample submitted having met the approval of the heads of that organization.

A. Danner Buehler and his counsel, George J. Benner Esq., appeared before council concerning Mr. Buehler's pavement and, after due discussion, council decided to fill for the proposed pavement to the necessary width and depth, the foundation being allowed sufficient time to settle. Mr. Buehler agreed, upon this being done, to lay pavement according to the present borough grade.

A notice was ordered sent to the Western Maryland Railway company, directing them to fill their tracks on North (Railroad) street so that they may be passable at any point.

Rev. William Hooper and Mr. Kepner requested a light on West Confederate avenue, on Seminary Ridge, and the light committee was instructed to furnish it provided permission could be secured from the National Park Commission to place a pole along the avenue.

The light committee was instructed to have removed the light at the furniture factories where the crossing over the railroad was formerly located.

PROMINENT FRUIT GROWER SUICIDES

Low Prices for this Year's Peach Crop Blamed for Financial Troubles of widely Known Mountain Orchardist. Made Assignment.

After writing nine letters giving directions for his funeral and telling why he wanted to die, J. H. Ledy, aged 51 years, of Marion, one of the most extensive fruit growers in Franklin County, Tuesday evening about 7:30 o'clock committed suicide in Hotel McLaughlin, Greencastle, by shooting himself in the head. Despondency brought on by financial trouble is assigned as the cause for the rash act. Mr. Ledy had a wide acquaintance among the fruit growers of Adams County.

Several days ago, Mr. Ledy made an assignment of his property in order to pay off debts amounting to $40,000. He brooded over his business failure. During the day he went to Greencastle, and engaged a room at the hotel. In the afternoon he wrote nine letters, one to the hotel proprietor apologizing for taking his life in the hotel; another to Undertaker Martin giving directions for his funeral; three to his wife and the rest to friends. Later in the evening he went to the bathroom where he took his life. The bullet entered the left temple and came out at the right temple.

Mr. Ledy was widely known and for years was a member of the lecture corps of the State Department of Agriculture. He was a member of many secret orders and took deep interest in lodge matters.

Coroner MacLay of Chambersburg made an investigation and deemed an inquest unnecessary. Mr. Ledy leaves a wife and two children.

Mr. Ledy's orchards comprise more than 200 acres with extensive buildings for packing and storage. His assets and his liabilities are equally estimated at about $40,000.

This was an unfortunate year for Mr. Ledy's fruit growing enterprise. The yield fell to a minimum season and all of Mr. Ledy's apple product has already reached the eastern market.

WIDENING TRACKS

To Make More Room for Monster Engines Used on Mountain Grades.

About fifty men are hard at work along the Western Maryland Railway between Pen Mar and the Buena Vista station, making improvements. Two large signal towers are being erected between these two points and the road bed, especially where there are curves, is being widened and the ravines filled with large rocks that are being blasted from the two long and deep cuts through which the tracks are laid.

The work is being done in order to make sufficient room for the several mammoth engines that have been purchased recently by the Western Maryland Railway to be used in hauling the heavy freight trains across the mountains.

DR. WEIGLE ON LUTHERAN UNION

Says Joining of Two Large Bodies Must not be One Sided Affair. Synod now in Session here Votes to Continue System of Licensure.

An interesting turn was given the meeting of the West Pennsylvania Synod in College Church this morning when Dr. E. D. Weigle, of Camp Hill, was speaking on the question of the licensing of young men to preach before their ordination for the Christian ministry.

Efforts were made to have the practice discontinued through amendment to the constitution. In the course of his remarks Dr. Weigle said that some other Lutheran bodies considered the matter un-Scriptural, and then alluded to other differences between the various synods and councils.

"I have lived a General Synod Lutheran," said Dr. Weigle, "and I expect to die one. There are some things in these other bodies that I can't swallow. If there is ever to be any union between the General Synod and the General Council it will not be through our going to them but they must come at least nearly half way toward us."

Dr. Weigle was interrupted by Dr. L. B. Wolf, who asked the president what question was under discussion. Dr. Weigle returned to his original subject and the question was then voted upon, the motion to change the constitution failing of the necessary two-thirds vote and the existing method of licensing continuing in effect.

Other business transacted at the morning session included the election of Rev. A. M. Heilman, of Hanover, and R. Wm. Bream and Prof. Albert Billheimer, of Gettysburg, to the educational board.

Rev. W. Morgan Cross, of Greencastle, was elected a trustee of the Tressler Orphans' Home at Loysville to fill the unexpired term of Dr. O. C. Roth, deceased, of Chambersburg. Alvin R. Nissly Esq., of Hanover, was elected a trustee of the home for a three year term.

Tuesday afternoon Dr. C. P. Wiles presented the interests of the Lutheran Publication Society. An interesting announcement to the delegates and Lutherans generally is the fact that the "Lutheran Observer" and the "Lutheran Church Work" have been merged and the first issue of the new paper will appear on October 28.

Tuesday evening Rev. A. M. Heilman, of Hanover, delivered an address on "The Universal, Everlasting Gospel", and Rev. S. C. Burger told of the work in the India Mission Field.

This evening's session will be in the nature of a laymen's meeting. "The Modern Layman" will be the subject of an address by Brooks E. Shell, of Lancaster, Ohio, and Harry Hodges, of Philadelphia, will speak on "The Luther League in America."

BELL BOY KILLED

He went to the elevator to answer a call from upstairs and had started the elevator before he had gotten fully on and was caught between the bottom floor of the elevator and second floor landing and was strangled to death. He was wedged so tightly that part of the elevator had to be cut away before the body could be released.

BULGARS BEGIN WAR ON SERBIA

Try to Cut Railroad the Allied Troops Must Use.

GERMANS ARE ADVANCING

Capture Both the Town and Fortress of Semendira, on Danube east of Belgrade.

London, Oct. 13.—Soon after news was received in London that Bulgaria had begun an attack upon Serbia the Bulgarian minister to Great Britain was handed his passports.

The Austro-German forward movement over the whole Serbian front is making good progress, according to the announcement in Berlin. Both the town fortress of Semendira, on the Danube east of Belgrade have been captured the announcement says. News of the Bulgarian attack upon Serbia comes in a despatch from Nish which says that the Bulgarians are attacking the Serbian positions in two localities, one at Vilkisavor, in the region of Zastichar, and the other at Kadibogaz, in the region of Kniashevatz.

The distance between Zastichar and the Rumanian frontier upon the Danube is not more than thirty miles in a straight line, and the Bulgarian attack is directed against the railway from the Danube to Nish, Uskub and Salonika, connecting Rumania with the Aegean sea.

The Serbian legation in London received news of a Bulgarian attack near Vlasina. The despatch, which comes from Nish, says: "Bulgarians began an attack in the direction of Vlasina. All attacks up to the present have been repulsed decisively."

Opening of hostilities against Serbia by Bulgaria has been a foregone conclusion since the rupture between Bulgaria and the allies.

Military experts have assumed that when Bulgaria struck she would attempt to seize the railroad running from Belgrade to Constantinople by way of Nish. This railroad serves as the main road over which Anglo-French troops landed at Salonika, Greece, can be transported into northern Serbia, runs parallel to the Bulgarian western frontier at a distance varying from eighteen to thirty-six miles.

A despatch from Sofia, the capital of Bulgaria, says that General Joffe, Bulgarian minister of war, who has just been appointed commander-in-chief of the Bulgarian forces, said in a statement to representatives of the foreign press:

"Bulgaria does not desire war. We mobilized only when the Serbians, instead of giving up Macedonia, concentrated troops on the Bulgarian frontier."

"Instead of compelling the Serbians to adopt a complaisant attitude the quadruple entente presented an ultimatum to Bulgaria, demanding an immediate breach with the central powers. This would have meant suicide for us."

ITALY TO KEEP TROOPS HOME

Decides Not to Take Part in Any Balkan Expedition.

Paris, Oct. 13.—Information here is that Italy has decided not to participate in the Balkan expedition.

The general staff of the Italian army is of the opinion it cannot spare a contingent to aid the allies in the Orient. All the men now mobilized, it is claimed, will be needed for the winter campaign in the Alps.

French military critics reply with the assertion that Italy is facing not more than 300,000 Austrians with an army of at least a million men, and with the winter near, when there can be no fighting in the Alps, she is in a far better position to send an expeditionary force against Turkey or Bulgaria than any of the allies.

New Orleans, Oct. 13.—The Parish grand jury exonerated Rev. Byron Holley, rector of St. George's Episcopal church here, who shot and killed Lansing G. Pearsall in the rectory. The minister told the police he mistook the young man for a burglar and no police charge was made. Witnesses before the grand jury testified that Pearsall apparently had been drinking.

ALLIES POUNDING AT GERMAN LINES

Fighting Continues Along the Trenches Captured.

London, Oct. 13.—Fighting continued northeast of Souchez and on the heights of La Folle, according to the announcement given out by the French war office. This is the region in which the British and French are co-operating in an effort to break the German hold in French Flanders.

Progress by the allied forces in Artois and Champagne was recorded in the French official communication and in a report from Field Marshal Sir John French. Paris reported perceptible gains in the Souchez Valley and the capture of the whole German fortified works south of Tahure, in Champagne.

Berlin reports the repulse of allied attacks near Souchez and violent bombardments in Champagne.

Figuring on the basis of 7000 to 8000 Germans killed in the recent fighting about Loos, it is believed that the losses in wounded must have approximated 30,000. From this may be judged the seriousness of the Germans of the check administered and the importance of the victory to the allies.

According to a despatch from Amsterdam, admission that German losses have been very heavy in the past few days on the western front is made by the correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt, who declares French attacks were carried out with "unprecedented vigor and courage." He estimates that within a brief period the French have fired more than three million shells against the German lines.

STRAW VOTE ON SUFFRAGE

Press of United States Favor Giving Women the Ballot.

New York, Oct. 13.—The Literary Digest has taken a poll of the press of the United States on the question of woman suffrage and the results show that "the ayes have it."

Letters were sent to 1000 papers in all parts of the country, requesting that they answer two questions, one to determine the editorial attitude toward the proposition and the other to discover the sentiment of the community represented. A total of 526 replies were received and every state was represented.

The personal views of the editors were shown in the following vote: Affirmative, 391; negative, 97; undecided, 28.

The sentiment of communities was reflected in this vote: Favorable, 237; negative, 156, and undecided, 133. As the Literary Digest points out, although the communities are in favor of "votes for women" the clear ayes are not in the majority.

WEARY MOTHER SLAYS FAMILY

Kills Herself and Three Children With Gas.

ARE FOUND DEAD IN BEDS

Mourning Death of Husband, Philadelphia Woman Seals Room and Turns On the Gas.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13.—Mrs. Rosa Hagar killed herself and her three little children at their home, 2026 S. Cleveland avenue, near Nineteenth street and Snyder avenue, by virtually sealing the two upstairs rooms and turning on the gas.

When found the children lay as they had slept in their night clothes, like waxen dolls, their faces innocent of trouble, while the mother wore a tense look, as one who had fought.

Tiny jewelry bedecked the arms and necks of the tots, who were Catherine, five years old; Arthur, four, and Harvey, Jr., seven months, and named after his father, who died last Thanksgiving of appendicitis.

Two other children, wards of charitable societies, who boarded with Mrs. Hagar, played in the parlor, while the deadly gas seeped in upon them. But they were not overcome. Mrs. Anna Craig, a neighbor, who discovered the tragedy, rescued the little boarders, one of whom is Benny Coleman, of Allentown, a cripple of two years, and the other, Anna Stone, eight months old.

Mrs. Craig says Mrs. Hagar, who was about thirty years old, had talked often of death these last few months, naming it as the only success for her troubles. She had grieved over her husband's death and her consequent financial straits, which were complicated when a woman boarder gave up her room Saturday.

Mrs. Craig, who lives at 2028 South Cleveland avenue, thought she smelled gas. Tracing its odor she came to the Hagar home, which she found locked and silent. She broke the front parlor window and came upon Benny Coleman, who held out his arms to her. The other little one crawled slowly about the floor. Mrs. Craig found the door locked and burst it open, only to be thrown back by the rush of gas, which filled the house, though the supply from the quarter had long since given out. She threw open the windows, climbed the stairs and, breaking another door in the second story middle room, saw what had happened.

In the center of the bed lay the mother, by her side Arthur and Harvey. On a bureau propped up so as to be seen at all angles, was a picture of the family, before Harvey, Jr., was born. Mrs. Craig threw open the window and gained the front room, where lay Catherine, on a couch, her arms and hair tossed in the position of natural sleep. The woman tried in vain to awaken Catherine and ask what had happened.

Then reaction gripped Mrs. Craig and she screamed again and again before she reached the street. Mrs. Mary Walters, another neighbor, caught her as she collapsed and some one telephoned Dr. A. P. Charlton, who came and pronounced the mother and children dead. They must have been that way for three or four hours, the police said.

RUSSIA TO AID IN BALKANS

Ample Forces at Allies' Command, Says French Premier.

Paris, Oct. 13.—In addressing the chamber of deputies, Premier Viviani said that Russian troops would be fighting alongside French and British troops in the Balkans.

France, Great Britain and Russia were in complete accord, he said, and ample troops were available without weakening any front.

The premier's statements were followed with strained attention both on the floor of the chamber and by the throngs which filled the galleries.

M. Viviani decided to address the chamber because of a committee resolution adopted, which read: "The committee is convinced of the necessity of a complete and immediate explanation on the part of the government."

GERMANS IN FLIGHT ON GALICIAN FRONT

Teuton Lines Cut by Furious Russian Offensive.

Petrograd, Oct. 13.—Russian forces have pierced the Austro-German lines on the Stripa river.

They have already taken prisoners more than 2000 men and sixty officers and have captured four guns and ten rapid fireers. The Russian advance in that region is being pushed vigorously.

The scene of this Russian victory is in eastern Galicia, where the troops of Emperor Nicholas started a formidable offensive, coincident with the opening of the Teutonic campaign against Serbia. The attack is being made north of the Rumanian border, and may have been undertaken with a view to the political effect on the Balkan situation. The Stripa river is a branch of the Danester, extending to the north, west of Tarnopol.

Successful operations against the Germans in the vicinity of Dvinsk are recorded in the official statement of the general staff.

Although little stress is laid upon it in the official report, the success obtained by the Russians in a counter-attack on a front twelve miles long from Garbounovka to Lautzesaghy was a decided one.

The new positions occupied by the Russians around Dvinsk fully cover the city and its environs and the taking up of the new lines has neutralized previous German successes.

ARREST GIRL FOR THEFT

Charged With Stealing $1000 Necklace at Country Club.

Reading, Pa., Oct. 13.—A diamond and pearl necklace, valued at $1000, stolen from Mrs. Thomas Souders, of Pottstown, at the fashionable Berkshire Country Club here, resulted in the arrest of Sophia Crundovitch, an employee of the club, who was taken to jail on a warrant charging her with larceny.

Mrs. Souders motored to the club and laid her necklace near a washstand. Then, it disappeared. The girl, who had asked for time off to go to the city, was apprehended by detectives, but a search at police headquarters revealed nothing on her person save some of the club's table linens. In her room were found several pieces of the club's silverware.

ONE HELD OUT

The Jury Unable to Agree and is Discharged.

After battling for the most part of 42 hours, in an endeavor to reach a verdict, twelve tried and determined looking jurors filed into the Harford County (Maryland) Circuit Court and told Judge Harlan that there was, no possible chance for them to reach an agreement in the noted criminal libel case of the state against J. Granville Heaps, a former student at Gettysburg College. The court told the jurors that it was to be regretted that they could not arrive at a verdict, after spending six days in the trial of the case, but that if they all felt as their foreman had announced, that an agreement was impossible, there was no use in keeping them together any longer, and they were discharged. The jury stood eleven for acquittal and one for conviction.

AMERICAN BOY HELD AS A SPY

Leaves Princeton, Joins British
Navy and Is Now In Tower.

FATHER INTERCEDES IN VAIN

Attempts to Prove to English Authorities, Through American State Department, That the Son Is Mentally Weak—"Had Germany on the Brain," Says Mother—Sentenced to Death.

Kenneth G. Triest, a nineteen-year-old freshman at Princeton, disappeared from college early in last January. No trace of him was found, though private detectives were employed to search, until recently a dispatch came to Wolfgang Gustav Triest at his New York home from the state department in Washington. It told the father that his lost boy was a prisoner in the Tower of London, accused, as a spy, of having enlisted in Great Britain's navy to learn secrets which he might send to Germany, the birthplace of his father. Practically day and night since then the father has worked to save his son from death, the fate of a spy. He has employed legal aid, has become his own private detective seeking evidence to help his son and said he had done what he thought was his utmost. He had presented evidence, the testimony of many of the boy's acquaintances, to show that his son was mentally unbalanced, to Secretary Lansing of the department of state and had asked that his boy be discharged and deported as an unbalanced minor.

Mr. Triest is a German by birth, but a naturalized citizen of this country.

The boy entered Princeton in the fall of last year, and his father heard from him regularly until about last New Year's day. Then young Triest left college and did not return. Neither did he visit the home of his parents nor communicate with them, and when his absence became sufficiently extended to be noted by the college authorities, they notified his parents.

Mr. Triest made inquiries among his friends. None had seen or heard from the boy. Fearful that some misfortune had overtaken the boy, Mr. Triest employed a detective agency to search for him.

This hunt by detectives was continued from day to day and from week to week, but no trace of the boy was found until last June. Then a letter was received from him by the boy with whom he had roomed in the few months he was at Princeton. This youth communicated at once with Mr. Triest.

"The letter told how my son had gone to England and had enlisted in the navy there," said Mr. Triest. "How he got there I haven't the slightest idea. I didn't supply him with funds. I never even saw or heard from him to do so and, as a fact, I haven't heard from him directly yet. He has never communicated with his mother or with me."

"I applied first once to the state department, going to Washington myself and trying to see Mr. Lansing. In this I failed, but I saw others and asked that my boy be sent home. At that time, you understand, I did not know he was in trouble, but only that he had performed a foolish boy's trick, and, being still a minor, might be discharged from the navy and returned to me at my request."

Youth Was Unbalanced.

"I had no word from the state department until the first of last month. Then I received the notice that my boy was under arrest and was to be tried as a spy. I hurried to Washington at once, taking my lawyer with me. This time I saw Mr. Lansing. I told him that my son was only a boy in years, that he was of German descent and enthusiastically for the fatherland. I told him that Kenneth had been upset mentally for some time, that I and all others who knew him believed that it was this condition that led him to run away from college and go abroad, and I asked that his trial be postponed only long enough to let me get evidence of the statements."

"Mr. Lansing succeeded in doing this much for me. My boy is a prisoner, but they held off his trial until I could get the evidence which I hope and pray may save his life. I went to Princeton and I got affidavits from his roommates, other students and instructors, testifying that he had shown himself unbalanced mentally when he was in college. These I have forwarded to Mr. Lansing, and I can do nothing now but wait. I pray they may let my boy go. He was not himself or he never would have got himself in such a position. He is only a child, and all I want is to have him back where I can take care of him."

Mrs. Triest, who had listened sorrowfully as her husband talked, broke in excitedly the instant he paused. She was on the verge of tears, apparently, and evidently was keeping a tight rein on her emotions.

"Kenneth had Germany on the brain," she exclaimed. "He was trying to get to Germany. I know he was, and he thought he could do it by joining the English navy. Would any one in sound senses do that? Doesn't it prove my poor boy's mind had given out under the great excitement of this war?"

A report received here from private sources in London said that the trial of young Triest had already been held and that he had been sentenced to die.

ALASKAN DOGS BOUGHT FOR SERVICE IN FRENCH ARMY

Canines From the Far North Purchased For Duty In Alsace.

A new acquisition to the French forces likely to prove valuable for use in Alsace-Lorraine and in Alpine service is the sturdy Newfoundland dog which is noted for long endurance and particular adaptability to drives in hilly regions.

The army dog has been used to haul light artillery. The fleet footed animals are paired off in teams of ten and twelve and are handled by expert drivers. The recent feats of dog teams in the Alsace region have brought out the superiority of the canine over the horse in certain regions.

The dogs have done so well that the French have sent to Alaska for fresh supplies of animals. These animals are the chief means of freight transportation in the icy regions of Alaska, where camps are many miles distant. The Alaskan canines also provide famous racing teams in the far north, where the Alaska sweepstakes are held each year.

The most recent acquisition of Alaskan dogs is the Allan-Darling team of racing dogs, twice winners of the famous 412 mile all Alaska sweepstakes race. This team has been sold to Lieutenant Haas of the French army for use in Alpine service.

The French also have bought more than 100 dogs from A. A. Allan and Mrs. C. E. Darling of Berkeley, Cal. Scotty Allan will go to France to drive the dogs.

The present town of Wisner contains 800 citizens and boasts of one of the finest Y. M. C. A. organizations in the state, a postoffice, general store, drug store, meat market, barber shop, electric light plant and many other conveniences of an ordinary city.

GOETHALS BEGINS FIGHT ON SLIDES

Panama Canal May Be Closed
For Another Month Yet.

SHIPS MAY GO ROUND CAPE.

Builder Who Resigned Reconsiders When Slides Give Trouble and Will Stay on Scene Until Traffic Is Again Opened—Washington Officials Not Worried.

Major General George W. Goethals, having withdrawn his resignation as governor of the Panama canal zone, says he will stay in Colon indefinitely, until conditions of the canal permits his departure. He does not appear worried over the slides.

He discussed conditions with Lieutenant Colonel Chester Harding, engineer of maintenance, and is making a personal study of the crumbling canal banks. General Goethals' reception was enthusiastic.

"Hindsight is better than fore sight," a prominent worker on the canal declared. "I see now that the steam shovels should have removed 2,000,000 cubic yards more from the slopes before we stopped using them. When we discontinued them the banks were in a condition considered in engineering practice to be safe. I do not see how we can use the shovels to advantage now."

Unless General Goethals applies here the methods the canal is likely to be blocked for another month.

May Go Around Cape Horn.

Officials believe that half the vessels stopped at both ends of the Panama canal in consequence of the unprecedented earth slide at the Gaillard cut will finish their voyages by sailing around Cape Horn rather than wait for the channel to be cleared once more.

The decision of General Goethals to remain at the canal until the slides there have been overcome is called good news in Washington, although there is not much concern among army engineers over the situation at the canal.

"There is no occasion for alarm over the slides in the Gaillard cut on the Panama canal," Brigadier General Kitchman, chief of engineers of the United States army, said.

"The cheapest, most satisfactory way is to remove the earth and rock as they slide into the canal, supplementing this with removals of earth from the top of the slide when it is known that it would move into the canal. The great danger doing the work are capable of removing a large earload at a time, and to more economical or expedient method has been devised."

"We could have kept the canal closed all this year to remove the slides and the earth that the engineers knew would slide in time. But we have kept the channel open a large part of the time, and already the canal tolls have exceeded the cost of operation."

WINTER TO BE A HARD ONE.

French Prognosticator Tells Why It Will Be Long, Cold and Stormy.

The winter of 1915-16, it is predicted, will be like the terrible winter of 1870-71, not only in that then, as now, the Germans were fighting on the soil of France, but in the rigor of the season. To this day the winter of 1870-71 is remembered all through France as the coldest, stormiest and longest season in the memory of living man, but Augustin Rey, the naturalist and meteorologist, has gone on record as predicting that the coming winter will be nearly, if not quite, as bad.

Mr. Rey, in a report to the French government, bases his prediction on the facts that the early snowfalls in the Alps have exceeded all records, that birds have been flying southward earlier than usual, that field mice have dug themselves in a month before their usual time and that vegetation shows many signs of nature's preparation for a long and fierce cold season.

WHITE HOSIERY URGED.

Federal Chemical Expert Gets New Suggestions to Solve Dye Problem.

One way to solve the scarcity of dyestuffs is to educate the people to wear white hosiery. This was the statement made to Dr. Thomas H. Norton, chemical expert of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, who is investigating the dyestuffs situation for the government. The man who advocates white hosiery as a solution of the serious dyestuffs shortage is the president of one of the largest knitting mills in the country.

The amount of sulphuric acid needed in the manufacture of artificial dyestuffs is enormous, and this special branch has been recently developed to a high degree in and near Pittsburgh. There are several works producing regularly the contact acid or oleum, which is indispensable in the production of the great variety of sulphoacids needed for a multiplicity of colors.

PATTON IS THE NEW SECRETARY

Appointment which has been Awaited with Interest by Many Adams County Farmers is Finally Made Has Been Progressive Man.

Charles E. Patton, of Curwensville, Clearfield county, former congressman from the Twenty-fifth congressional district, was on Tuesday appointed the first secretary of agriculture under the new act creating the State Commission of Agriculture and reorganizing the department.

Selection of Mr. Patton was made by the Governor after long and careful study of men suggested for the place. Dozens of names were placed before the Governor, including some who had been prominent in political affairs and in agriculture's allied branches. He canvassed every man and had some of them meet him.

The Governor summed up Mr. Patton's appointment by saying: "Mr. Patton's record is well known to the people of Pennsylvania. He is one of the most successful farmers in the central part of the State. As a member of Congress he served upon the national committee of agriculture and as a businessman he has demonstrated executive capacity. He is a man of probity and the type of citizen that I am proud to have associated with me in public work."

Mr. Patton has taken a big interest in improving livestock in his district, having imported blooded animals and encouraged the business. He has also taken considerable interest in the development of scientific agriculture and given use of his lands for demonstrations. The Governor heard of his work months ago and his attention was attracted to it.

The Clearfield man then made a study of the department and its divisions and activities and a few days ago sent his acceptance. The secretary is to be the executive officer of the new commission of agriculture and will be paid $5,000 per year. He will have charge of all the work and the Governor will entrust him with his plans for reorganization.

TEACHERS' MEETING

Topics Discussed and Good Entertainment by Pupils.

The educational meeting at Fairfield Station on last Friday evening was largely attended. The following teachers were present: Wilson Hummelbaugh, Harry Pecher, Clara Hoof-jagle, Gifford Hummelbaugh, Alma Kittinger, Lou Etta Sharetts, Gladys Metz, Maude Shue, and Goldie Currens. The following subjects were discussed: "Punishment in School" by J. Harry Pecher and Wilson Hummelbaugh; "How to Teach History Successfully," by Miss Sharetts and Prof. C. A. Landis.

Miss Kittinger had quite an elaborate program arranged in her school showing skill in the way the children recited and in their singing.

The meeting closed by singing "America." The next meeting will be held at the Tract School, Miss Gifford Hummelbaugh, teacher. Date not fixed.

Prof. C. A. Landis and Miss With-erow from Fairfield borough, were also present. Two school directors were present, William Allison and Joseph Musselman.

Not a Nation of Singers.

In this country, though we have produced many fine voices, we have never become a nation of singers. There are, it is true, in most of the leading cities, choral societies, but the singing of large groups of people is comparatively uncommon among us. Here is a matter for regret, for among all large bodies of singers where there has been more or less training the effect is beautiful and inspiring. In fact, there are few things in music more impressive than the singing of hundreds of voices.

Laugh and Grow Well.

Gloom is not a virtue, any more than filth. The "odor of sanctity" does not necessarily involve a long face and a long black frock coat and infrequent baths. Laughter is good medicine, both for the body and the mind. The man who laughs is likely to be a healthy man, and a happy man, and he is rarely a villain.

MARKING A SAILOR

Naval Arm Insignia Worn by Uncle Sam's Enlisted Men.

TELLS THEIR RANK AND WORK.

The Bluejackets Are Proud of These Class Symbols, and Only the Novices Are Without Them—Marines Have Their Own Special Insignia.

Uncle Sam seems to be a wise old boy. He has found the secret of averting labor difficulties and raising the dignity of labor aboard ship by giving the marines and sailors who are assigned to special duties arm insignia to distinguish their callings and ranks. Mechanics, clerks, carpenters and deck men are given just as much attention when it comes to insignia as are the admirals, captains, lieutenants, ensigns and other commissioned men. And if the truth were only known the jackies take even more pride in displaying the marks that have been conferred upon them.

Uncle Sam has a peculiar method of marking his men, but he has never taken into consideration that the public would like to be taken into the secret. The consequence is that the men who have been honored with the distinguishing marks and it is only the novices or newcomers who have not a mark of some kind—must suffer and be prepared always while on shore leave to answer the questions of the curious.

The insignia, however, are simple enough when understood. A symbol of some sort is used to distinguish the man's following. For instance a chief yeoman has two crossed keys on his coat sleeves, signifying that he has the keys to the stores and is a clerk on board the ship. An eagle appears over every mark and there are qualifying stripes under the symbol to show whether the man is first class, second class or third class. If he is of the latter rank he has only one stripe. If he is a chief petty officer he wears connecting lines between the curved line under the eagle and the stripes. Otherwise he simply wears the eagle and the stripes. This is true with all men.

In some instances, however, the stripes under the symbol typify the man's distinctive office. For instance, a machinist of the first class wears three stripes. A water tender has the same mark under a propeller. A man with two stripes is either an oiler or a machinist's mate.

A man with two crossed quills is a pay clerk. A turret with a gun signifies that the wearer is a turret captain. A globe means the man is an electrician. A carpenter has two hatchets. A crescent is worn by a commissary or a commissary's steward. A quartermaster in the navy wears a wheel, while the man with the same distinction in the marine corps has crossed quills for his insignia.

Many of the naval men also wear a single stripe across the shoulder. Those who wear red belong to the engineers' corps. If a man with a red stripe has one white stripe on his cuff he is a coal passer; if two, he is a second class fireman and if three, a third class fireman.

The deck force wear a white stripe across the shoulder. If a man has two stripes on his cuff he is an ordinary seaman; if three, a seaman, and a single stripe means he is an apprentice or a landsman.

All the petty officers wear blue rating on the white clothes and red on the blue. A man who has won three successive rating medals for good conduct is permitted to wear gold. Those who are in the special or the engineers' branch wear their rating on the left arm, and the seamen wear theirs on the right. Enlistment stripes are also worn, one for each four years. Chief petty officers, besides having the connecting lines over their insignia, also wear brass buttons on their coats.

The marine insignia are slightly different. In the first place the markings are in gold and therefore much brighter and are more noticeable. This is true only with the dress uniform. With the khaki clothes the men wear field chevrons with narrow marks. A marine corporal has two stripes and a sergeant three stripes. A first sergeant has a diamond under his stripes, and a sergeant major has additional stripes under the diamond. A gunnery sergeant has a leaf and an acorn under his stripes; a quartermaster sergeant has quills; a drummer has cross sticks and a trumpet crossed bugles. Officers in the marine corps have their insignia on both arms.—Philadelphia North American.

That's All.

The borrower, at the phone: "Is this you, Miller? Yes, pretty well. Say, Miller, I've got half a dozen books of yours that you let me take last spring. I wish you'd stop for them as you go by. And, say, Miller, I want you to bring over your set of Plutarch and that early edition of Pops and your French dictionary. If I'm not at home you can leave them with the maid. Yes, that's all. Goodby."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Sure Cure.

"My love, I wish you wouldn't paint." "All the women do, dear." "But it looks like an admission on your part that you are not already perfect, and that pains me." "What could she do but stop?—Kansas City Journal.

KEEPING HOUSE IN FRANCE.

Economy Rules, and Food For One Day Only Is Bought at a Time.

In the French markets you can buy any portion of food you may wish. Nothing is too small. No tradesman stares if you say, "M'sieu, I want one egg," or "I will take a quart (which is an eighth of a pound) of butter." And if you ask for a half pound of meat he doesn't cut it to weigh three quarters of a pound. You don't let him, and he knows it. The French housewife has been for generations educating the French shopkeeper to sell in the way that she would have him.

It is popularly supposed by some people that there is economy in buying in bulk. But the Frenchwoman says otherwise. She says that of a large quantity some of it is almost sure to spoil, and in the end you lose more than you have gained even by your wholesale price. So she buys her butter, as everything else, just enough for the day. And she has a marvelous intuition for guessing what that amount will be down to the very son. The test of her skill in housewifery, she considers, is an empty cupboard at sundown. Then she requires no ice to keep things over until the next day.

The cost of ice, which in many an American household amounts to $1 a week, would be an unthinkable extravagance in France. There is no ice-box among the fittings of the Paris kitchen. Instead, there is in every apartment the cold storage cupboard, set in the kitchen wall with shutters on the outside, through which there is always a circulation of air. A wire netting on the inside of the shutter protects the food from dust.

The cupboard is an entire success in keeping food for the length of time that the Parisian housewife requires, else, you may be sure, she would not use it, for she never throws anything away. Not to waste the smallest scrap or crumb is a fundamental dogma of her housekeeping creed. Even every stale crust of bread must be saved. It is grated to reduce it to crumbs. These are kept in the tin can that sets on the chimney shelf over the stove. There are five or six purposes for which you use breadcrumbs—for French toast, for bread soup or for pudding, for filling poultry or in frying croquettes of "breeding" chops, or, very important, indeed, is it to know that by mixing an equal part of them with chopped meat worth only to centimes and an egg and rolling all in a cabbage leaf to bake in the oven they serve the clever purpose of making the meat go at least twice as far again. Yes; it is some fussing to fix it. But it doesn't matter at all that this takes time. The Frenchwoman applies always but one test, "Is it cheaper?"—Pictorial Review.

An Indignant Poet.

Beranger, the famous French poet, whose greatest gift lay in writing little poems which he called songs, was particularly dependent upon the chance visits of the muse.

He was once visited by the author and academicien Viennet, who said to him:

"You must have written several songs since I saw you last."

"I have only begun one," answered Beranger.

"Only one? I am astonished!" exclaimed Viennet.

Beranger became indignant.

"Humph!" he shouted. "Do you think one can turn off a song as one turns off a tragedy?"

Outlawry.

Outlawry existed in England and Scotland from very early days. Earl Godwin and Hereford the Wake were famous political outlaws. At one time the sentence was used to punish any one who would not pay the "were," or blood money, to the relatives of a man he had killed. In civil proceedings it was abolished in 1879. In the old days an outlaw could be killed whenever or wherever he was encountered, but this part of the penalty was abolished.

A Modern Solomon.

A Philadelphia police magistrate was called on to decide the ownership of a dollar bill which was found in the street by a negro and claimed to have been lost by a white man. After hearing the story of each claimant the court said:

"I believe the dollar belonged to the white man, but since the negro found it he is entitled to a reward. I therefore decree that each take 50 cents and call it a day's work."

Rusty Steel.

Onions are good for cleaning steel articles that have rusted. Rub the rust spots with a piece of onion and leave for twenty-four hours. Wash and polish with bath brick dust, moistened with turpentine. Wash again in suds and send with clear water. Knives that have rust spots of long standing should be plunged into an onion and allowed to stand for some time. Finish the cleaning process as above.

Wise Judge.

A Montana woman sued for divorce because her husband kissed the servant girl.

"You want this man punished?" said the judge.

"I do," said she.

"Then I shall not divorce you from him," said the judge.

Not Quite.

RULED THE SIKHS

An American Who Became Governor of Gujarat, in India.

A REAL SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

Picturesque Career of Dr. Harlan of Philadelphia, Who For Years Was the Power Behind the Throne of Ranjit Singh, King of the Punjab.

The Sikhs of India are a religious sect that have come to be a really distinct race and have developed into a military people. They are brave and stalwart soldiers and have the reputation of being absolutely fearless in battle.

It is interesting to know that an American was once ruler over these people, the great Sikh king of the Punjab. This American was Dr. Harlan of Philadelphia, and his career in India was surely as picturesque as that of any adventurer who ever set forth from the United States to win fame in far distant lands.

In the year 1825 Dr. Harlan sailed from Boston as surgeon apothecary to one of the old East Indian ships. He arrived in India at the time of the first Burmese war, when surgeons were badly needed for the British expeditionary force, and he jumped at the chance to see something of a little-known country.

At the end of the campaign he was discharged. That offended his sense of justice and perhaps moved him to take the side of the Indian princes in their conflicts with the British. It was the period of the downfall of the Mogul Empire and the carving up of it into several independent kingdoms. There were big chances for a man of adventurous spirit, so Harlan went up country and offered his services to Ranjit Singh, the Sikh king of the Punjab.

Ranjit Singh had confederated the Sikh states into a single nationality under his power at Lahore, organized a well-trained army under some of Napoleon's former French officers, and was bent on extending his sway over most of the remaining Mogul empire. It was at this moment that Harlan turned up in Lahore. It is said he cured the Sikh king of some illness and won his friendship.

By that time, by the year 1827, Harlan had risen to such high favor that he was appointed governor of the great province of Gujarat. There for ten years he ruled, but at last he came to a parting of the ways with Ranjit Singh, either because he had quarreled with the king over his severity in punishing criminals, or because the British interests in India did not approve of an American in so important an office, and diplomatically suggested his removal. At all events, he resigned and made for Kabul, in Afghanistan. There Dost Mohammed, the amir, was preparing for war with the British.

The journey was a perilous one in those days, but Harlan made it successfully, and either by reason of his impressive appearance or the information he could give Dost Mohammed he soon came to stand high in the amir's confidence.

But when war actually broke out Dost Mohammed showed a complete incapacity to conduct it intelligently. He seems to have taken Harlan for a renegade Englishman, whose advice could not be safely trusted. He failed to take the precaution of fortifying the Bolan pass as Harlan urged, and the British marched through it to enter Kabul.

Dost Mohammed's stardom seems to have disgusted Harlan with the Asiatics, for he is next found as the friend and guest of Sir Henry Lawrence, high commissioner of the Punjab. While visiting Sir Henry one of the servants stole 100 rupees from him. Harlan told Sir Henry and asked permission to be allowed to get it back in his own way. So Sir Henry consented, but stipulated that he should not injure any of the servants.

Harlan had all the servants in the house called to his room, the door of which he locked; then, drawing his sword and looking as fierce as he could, he told them he would cut the head off every man in the room if the thief did not confess and restore the money. The fellows, knowing Harlan's reputation, were badly frightened, and the guilty man confessed.

Dr. Harlan returned to New York in the forties and lived there until his death, about 1850, but before that time the Sikh power was swept away at the decisive battle of Gujarat, Dhillip Singh, the son and successor of Ranjit Singh, was sent into exile, and the province over which Harlan ruled was incorporated in the British Indian empire.—Youth's Companion.

TELLS PUBLIC HOW

TO AVOID ILLNESS

Education Greatest Factor in Preventing Disease.

WHAT NEW YORK IS DOING.

Every Time a Child Is Born the State Department of Health Immediately Sends Mother Papers Telling What to Do to Keep the Youngster in Perfect Physical Condition.

"Efficient birth reporting, such as we are now securing in New York state, is essential in carrying on an effective infant welfare campaign. Every time a birth is reported the state department of health sends to the mother circulars dealing with child welfare," said C. D. A. Winslow, director of the division of publicity and education of the health board, in a recent address at Rochester.

"It is unnecessary to argue before the American Public Health association as to the importance of public health education as a factor in the prevention of preventable disease.

"It was in the campaign against tuberculosis that the importance of reaching the individual citizen, and teaching him about the conduct of his individual life was first definitely grasped. In the case of this disease it was quite clear that the most important of all measures were those which built up the vital resistance of the body and maintained the fighting ability which is so effective against this particular microbe enemy. Sanitary shops and tenements were needed; the sanitary care of sputum was needed; but above all, healthy habits of individual living were essential. Hence the anti-tuberculosis movement became a great campaign of popular education. It was animated by a new idea, the idea of bringing hygienic knowledge right to the individual in his home or in his shop, and it developed a new machinery, a new system of organization, for bringing about this end.

"In doing this work the medical and sanitary experts, and particularly the social workers, not only pointed the way to a conquest of the great white plague, but set in motion forces which are revolutionizing the campaign for public health in every field. The same thing has happened more recently in the movement for the reduction of infant mortality.

"Education is indeed the keynote of the modern campaign for public health. Tuberculosis and infant mortality are pre-eminent among all the causes of preventable disease and death as the greatest scourges, from the abatement of which the largest results for humanity are to be attained. In each case the fight must be won not merely by the construction of public works, but by altering the daily conduct of the individual life.

"The same thing is true with regard to the spread of the acute contagia, the burden of infectious disease, the obnoxious effects of defective eyes and ears and teeth. In the campaign against the degenerative diseases of adult life, which progressive state and city health departments are now initiating, the education of the individual is practically our only weapon. In every one of these cases the fight can be won by spreading clear and definite knowledge of the ways in which disease is caused and the ways in which it may be prevented.

"The greatest recognition of these facts is very recent, and the technique of the art of public health education must be elaborated and perfected during the next few years.

Educating the Public.

"The various activities, literature, lectures and exhibits, form almost everywhere the elements of the educational public health campaign. One of the tasks of the future, as it seems to me, is to add to such training of the individual in the elements of hygiene and sanitation some definite plan of health organization, which shall make our health militia more effective for all necessary forms of common action.

"Much progress has been made during the past decade in arousing public sentiment as to the need for activities along health lines. Many communities now have infant welfare stations, visiting nurse associations, tuberculosis committees and other organizations which include health work more or less prominently in their programs.

"If there were a central health council in each community representing all the various health activities it might serve as a valuable board of strategy for utilizing the health forces of the community to the best advantage. Such a central council would, of course, have no power to control the action of agencies already in existence. Its meetings, however, would act as a clearing house for information as to overlapping and as to unutilized needs. It would give to all its constituent organizations a clearer view of their work in relation to the whole problem, and the council once formed would be in a position to plan new health activities intelligently and to bring an organized force of public opinion to bear for securing funds from either public or private sources."

When the Car Starts Hard.

It is not often that a car starts hard when hot. When it does there may be too much adjustment of the valve tappet. When cold, so that when the motor is warm the valves do not shut tightly. Or the cause may be in the spark plugs. If these are heavily covered with carbon the resistance offered by the deposits will increase with their temperature; furthermore, the plugs expand in the heat, which again tends to increase the resistance.

OLD AND NEW WAY TO TREAT CATARRH

Breathing a Germ Killing Air Endorsed by Actual Results.

The discovery of Hyomei has wrought a wonderful change in the treatment of catarrh.

Prior to three years ago the medicines ordinarily employed in the cure of this disease were drugs, sprays, lotions, etc. In some instances they benefited, but the improvement was not lasting.

With Hyomei you take into the air passages of your throat and head a balsamic air that goes into the joints of the cells, and should, effectively, kill all germs and microbes of catarrh. Its purpose is to enter the blood with the oxygen, killing the germs in the blood, and restore health to the whole system. Many astonishing testimonials have been received from those who have been helped by Hyomei.

A complete outfit is inexpensive and includes an inhaler, dropper, and sufficient Hyomei for several weeks' treatment.

Perhaps the strongest evidence that can be given to doubters, is the fact that The People's Drug Store have so much faith in Hyomei that they sell every package under a positive guarantee to refund the money if it does not relieve.

GRANDMA USED SAGE
TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

The Mixed Sulphur with it to Restore Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur, and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous, remove every bit of dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, gray or dry, scraggly and thin. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur reappears at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use tonic, costing about 50 cents as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of fuss.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it does so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and lustrous.

Hero Slugger Lewis Slams a Double and Scores Winning Run for Red Sox.

WORLD SERIES STANDING

Won	Lost	P.C.
Boston	3	1 .750
Phillies	1	3 .250

Boston, Oct. 13.—Ernie Shore, the lanky twirler of the Red Sox, obtained revenge on the Phillies for his defeat in the opening game of the world series at Philadelphia last Friday, when he beat them in the fourth of the inter-league struggle at Braves field.

Final score: Boston, 2; Phillies, 1. The victory of the Red Sox by exactly the same score they won by on Saturday and Monday gives the American League champions a 3 to 1 advantage in the series, and it is up to Alexander to win today's game in Philadelphia if Moran's men are going to land the baseball champion ship.

Shore pitched a good game for the Red Sox, but he had a formidable opponent in George Chalmers, the Phillies' spitball artist, who twirled a heady game before the great, hostile throng, at his first world series appearance.

It was the great work of Duffy Lewis, the hero of the 1915 series, which gave the Boston team their victory. He made what seemed to be two impossible catches, cutting off at least one run, and it was his savage two-base drive in the sixth inning which sent Hoblitzel over the plate with the winning run.

A throng of 41,096 attended the game, and occupied every available advantage point. The total receipts were $29,046.50.

Jack Barry opened the third by working Chalmers for a pass. Cady bunted to the pitcher's box, and "Dut" elbowed and fell on the ball.

Luderus ran over to help him, but Chalmers got up and started to throw to first. Nobody was on the bag. Niehoff neglecting to come over, Cady was credited with a hit. Shore advanced the runners with a sacrifice tap to Stock. Hooper then batted the ball over Chalmers' head. Niehoff could not field it in time, and Barry scored.

The winning run was scored by the Red Sox in the sixth inning. Hoblitzel drove a solid single to center after Speaker had grounded out. "Duffy" Lewis then took a terrific swing on the ball and shot it between Whitted and Paskert. The ball rolled to the fence and Hoblitzel scored easily. Whitted's smart return held Lewis to two bases, where Duffy was deserted by his fellow batsmen.

The single tally of the Phillies was scored in the eighth inning. Bancroft opened the session with a short fly to left, which the series hero caught by a terrific sprint. That was a hit lost. Paskert popped to Gardner for the second out, but Cravath's powerful bat shot the ball bounding over Speaker's cap for three bases. Luderus sent one to the same place, scoring Gavy, but Tris's smart fielding held the Phillies' first baseman to a single.

Duguey sent in to run for Luderus, stole second, but the inning ended when Shore grabbed Whitted's vicious bouncer and tossed him out. The score:

MUST BE MADE IN U. S.

Bride of President Will Have American Made Trousseau.
Washington, Oct. 13.—When Mrs. Norman Galt becomes the wife of President Wilson, some time within the next two months, her trousseau will be composed of articles all of which will be "made in America."
Not a single article will be used, it was said, that is not manufactured in the United States except some lace neckties which have been in the family of Mrs. Galt for generations. Washington will produce most of the articles for the trousseau, but Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York all will contribute a part.
To demonstrate how thoroughly the immediate family of the president approves the match, it is announced that Miss Margaret Wilson will return about October 20 to reside as mistress of the White House at a series of pre-wedding functions in honor of her father's bride-elect. All three of the president's daughters are pleased over the prospect of the marriage.

It was semi-officially stated that before the marriage a formal announcement of the date and place will be made. This dispenses of reports that they might be married within a few days.

U. S. LOAN APPROVED BY COMMONS

Chancellor McKenna Defends the Terms.

London, Oct. 13.—The bill authorizing the loan which had been negotiated in the United States passed all stages in the house of commons.

The bill authorizing the loan was introduced by Reginald McKenna, chancellor of the exchequer, who defended as fair and reasonable the terms of the loan arranged by the commission. He said the true values of these terms could be estimated only by comparing them with the rate of interest paid in this country, by which, he argued, Great Britain was merely paying one-half of one per cent. more than the market rate.

During the debate on the bill there was some criticism of the rate of interest. John Dillon, supporting the terms, declared the success of the loan was an index of popular sentiment in America toward the allies. "The loan," said Mr. McKenna, "is for the purpose of paying our trade debt and maintaining our exchange in the United States. Our imports from North America have largely increased since the beginning of the war, and our exports have diminished. The increase in imports for the first six months of 1915, excluding government supplies not included in the customs returns, amounted to $292,500,000, and the reduction in exports during the same period was $50,000,000, thus making the adverse balance $342,500,000.

GORZ NEAR ITS FALL

Key to Trieste Under Bombardment at Five Points and About to Yield.

Geneva, Oct. 13.—The Austrian city of Gorz, twenty-two miles northwest of Trieste, is about to fall, according to a telegram received here from Brescia.

The Italians, the despatch says, have brought up a large number of heavy guns and are bombarding the town from five different points. At the same time the Italians are attacking the inner defenses of Tolmino, while on the Carso the Austrians are said to have been forced to abandon several miles of trenches.

SCIENCE—INVENTION.

Great Prehistoric Lake.

Lake Agassiz was a body of fresh water that existed during a late stage of the glacial epoch in the valley of Red River and extended northward from the present head of that stream for nearly 700 miles. The area of the lake at the time of its greatest expansion was about 110,000 square miles, exceeding the present aggregate area of the five great lakes tributary to the St. Lawrence.
The shore of this ancient lake is marked by well defined beaches, and it is from these that the existence and the extent of the lake are known. The lake was named by the geologist Warren Upham in honor of Louis Agassiz, who was the first to make a systematic study of glaciers and glacial phenomena.—United States Geological Survey.

Oklahoma's Gas Field.

The United States geological survey has made public a report on the Loco gas field, Oklahoma, by Carroll H. Wegemann. The Loco field is on the line between Stephens and Jefferson counties, about three miles southwest of the village of Loco and ten miles northwest of the Healdton oil field. For many years asphalt deposits have been known to exist in this vicinity, but deep drilling for oil and gas was not begun until 1912. The first gas well was struck in the spring of 1913, about six months before the Healdton pool was discovered. Six other gas wells of capacities ranging from 6,000,000 to 20,000,000 cubic feet a day have been drilled, but no pipe line has yet been laid to the field, and the wells are capped.

Close Estimating.

A geologist of the United States geological survey once estimated 3,000 feet as the necessary depth to drill in a certain locality to find water, with the result of less than 1 per cent of error, a flow measuring half a million gallons a day having been struck at a depth of 2,987 feet. In another branch of the work of the survey, that of estimating at the close of the calendar year the production of the various minerals during that year, even this percentage of error is being reduced. The survey's estimate on Jan. 1, 1915, of the production of iron ore was 41,440,000 long tons. The actual figures received from all the companies are now seen to be 41,433,761 long tons, a difference of only 239 tons.

Protection For Roofs.

One of the greatest dangers from snow on roofs of large area is the sliding and bunching of the snow on a small area near the bottom, says Popular Mechanics, with the result that one part of the roof is not only overloaded, but is in danger of leaking.

ROOF SHOE PREVENTS SNOW SLIDING.

When thawing occurs through the action of the water in working under the joints of the roof covering. A new device designed to take the place of the snow rails, or gutters, ordinarily used to prevent this, consists of an up-standing shoe attached to the roof by an iron strap, as many of these shoes being spaced over the roof as may be necessary to hold the snow where it falls. The shoe is made with various kinds of straps to suit the different kinds of roofs.

Vegetable Wool of Ecuador.

Kapok, known in Ecuador as "lana de celiba," or "vegetable wool," is a product of the largest tree that grows in the forests of the littoral, a species of the genus Eriodendron (called the cotton plant). The celiba bears most of its branches near the top, and the appearance of its bright yellow flowers marks the approaching end of the rainless season. After the flowers fade the pods that yield the kapok of commerce are formed. These are gathered and the fiber extracted by hand. Too early rains interfere with pollination, resulting in many empty pods.—Commerce Reports.

GIBSON, THE DWARF.

This Seventeenth Century Midget Won Fame as an Artist.

Purveyors of side show amusements are agreed, it is said, that dwarfs no longer may be counted upon to draw audiences, no matter how gifted these Lilliputians may be. In Charles Stratton, known the world over by his pseudonym of Tom Thumb, this country furnished the most attractive dwarf that ever exploited his accomplishments and who, as stated by his sponsor in what was considered the most "stunning" advertising of the day, was "the delight of all the crowned heads of Europe" as well as of the uncrowned sovereigns of America.

Great as Tom Thumb was in his time, there were dwarfs preceding him that made most enviable reputations. Among these were Richard Gibson, age seventy-five at his death, July 23, 1680, and his widow, who died nineteen years later at the advanced age of eighty-nine. Gibson was a miniature painter—miniature in every sense of the phrase—as well as court dwarf to Charles I. of England, and his wife, Ann Shepherd, was court dwarf to Queen Henrietta Maria. Her majesty prompted a marriage between these two clever but diminutive persons, and the marriage proved a happy one. The little couple had nine children, five of whom lived to years of maturity and were of ordinary stature.

Gibson's works were valued, and one of them was the innocent cause of a tragic event. This painting represented the parable of the lost sheep and was highly prized by the king, who gave it in charge of Vandervoort, the keeper of the royal pictures. One day the king asked for this picture. Afraid or ashamed to say that he mislaid it, Vandervoort committed suicide by hanging. A few days after his death the picture was found in the spot where he had placed it. Gibson and his wife have, however, been exalted in brevity of stature, as the united height of the two was about seven feet.—Indianapolis News.

MEANING AND SAYING.

Lines of Good Writers That Mangle the Laws of Grammar.

The late and delightful Professor Tom Lounsbury of Yale always maintained that usage made language and his contempt for critics who were strict constructionists was far from concealed; he rather rejoiced in it. Presumably, therefore, he would say that a couple of sentences, which we are about to quote, were all right. They are justified by his standard—they convey to the reader the idea the writer had in mind. For what else is an article written?

Here are the cases, accidentally happened upon in casual reading. Arthur Christopher Benson in his series of essays on "Faint" writing of Sam Johnson, says, "No biographer likes, and seldom dares to," etc. Now you know what he means, but what he says is that "no biographer seldom dares," and, mangle the negative, this means that a biographer usually dares, and that is exactly what Mr. Benson didn't mean.

The other quotation is from George A. Birmingham's clever travel sketch, "From Dublin to Chicago." In this, telling of the slowness with which so many American hotels and restaurants fill the order for meals, he says the guest could smoke a cigarette "between each course." There, too, the reader knows what is meant, but in fact you can't get "between each." It must be between each and something else. Can you get between a stone wall or between noon, or between as in the shade, or, indeed, between the soup? What he should have said to complete his English was "between each course and the next."

In both instances every reader knew what the writer intended to convey. Would the professors have pronounced these breaks justifiable? They are far from being exceptional. You can find them in the standard authors.—Hartford Courant.

She Knew Better.

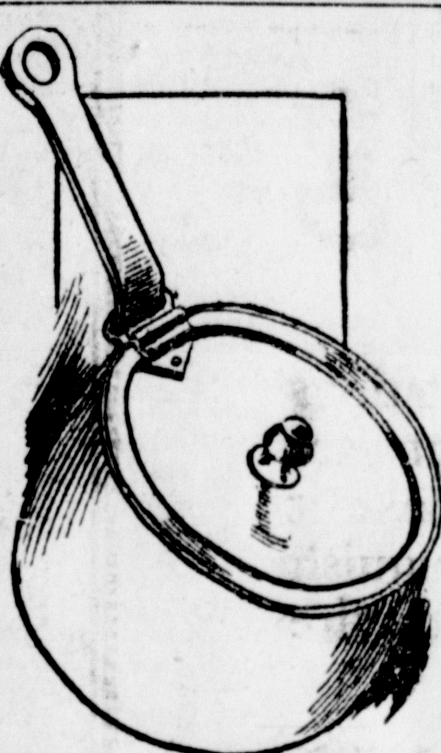

Ostensible Head of the Family—Maria, there was a canvasser at the office today who wanted to sell me a work on etiquette and good behavior. Teaches it in six lessons. I told him I'd ask you if you thought we wanted it.
Real Head—It's all humbug, John. I can't be taught in six lessons. I've been trying to teach it to you for sixteen years and haven't succeeded yet.—Exchange.

Velvet Cake.

One-fourth pound of butter creamed with one-half pound of sugar; add three eggs, one at a time, beating well after each egg is dropped in. Add gradually one-half cupful lukewarm milk, beat well, then add one-half teaspoonful of baking powder mixed with one-half pound of flour. Flavor and beat thoroughly.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Loose Hinged Pot Lid That Is Easily Detached.

A new pot lid is hinged loosely to the handle of the pot, so that it can be thrown back without actual detachment for examination of the contents of the kettle, or it may be removed entirely by slipping the lid over the handle. This comprises an improvement which will be generally appreciated by all women who must take upon themselves at least a part of the kitchen responsibilities. The weak point of such utensils is usually at the hinge, where there seems to be the greatest strain, and here the signs of dissolution appear, whereas in the construction noted herewith a great deal of this strain is overcome by the flexible character of the connection and the life of the kettle greatly prolonged.

Meringue Cream Pie.

Have ready a baked crust and put on one pint of milk to boil. Put in a bowl the yolks of two eggs, three-quarters of a cupful of sugar, a tiny pinch of salt, three heaping tablespoonfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of lemon extract and one-half of vanilla. Stir all together good, and when the milk boils add this to it and stir till it is cooked, when it will be thick, smooth and creamy. Then pour in the crust, add the meringue and bake. For the meringue use the whites of two eggs, and put them in a deep plate with the thinnest bit of salt and beat with a silver fork till it is very stiff and there are no large air bubbles. Then add two level tablespoonfuls of granulated sugar and beat till one can pile it in great fluffy piles on the pie. Then spread on the pie, putting the last two tablespoonfuls in piles in the middle just as they drop from the spoon. Bake in a quick oven.

Spiced Peaches.

Spiced peaches are a toothsome dainty that goes especially well with cold meat. Select firm, juicy peaches, peel them, but leave the fruit whole with the pits in and stick into each peach five or six whole cloves. Prepare the sirup by boiling together three pints of cold water, one pint of the best elder vinegar and one quart of brown sugar. Add a small cheesecloth bag containing a broken stick of cinnamon, a tiny piece of ginger root, one dozen whole cloves, one nutmeg cut in two and a teaspoonful of allspice. Cook the sirup until rather thick, put in the peaches and simmer gently until tender. Arrange in sterilized jars, pour over the spiced sirup and seal immediately.

Hints on Jam-Making.

The secret of making jam the right consistency is to cook it sufficiently. Select perfectly dry fruit, using three-quarters of a pound of sugar to one pound of fruit. Simmer gently for the first quarter of an hour, then rapidly until finish. This can be ascertained if a little of the sirup is placed on a plate and forms a stiff jelly. See that the jars are dry and do not close up till quite cold. If the jars are thoroughly washed in boiling water before being filled and set by the fire to keep warm there will not be any fear of the jam going moldy.

Homemade Grape Juice.

Pick the grapes from the stems, wash well, then put over the fire in a granite kettle. Do not use tin, as it discolors the juice. Heat the grapes until the juice flows, then strain through a heavy cloth. Allow plenty of time for this process, not less than twenty-four hours. Add as much water as you have juice, and to every quart of the mixture add one cupful of sugar. Place over the fire, boil for five minutes, then bottle.

The Really Great

Show me the man who says "I will." Not the one who says "I'll try." The one with a wealth of crimson fluid. And the steel blue tint in the eye. The one who moves with earnest men. While others stand round and wait. 'Til numbered among the might have been. And I'll show you a type of the great.

Show me the man who stands alone. No matter what'er the odds. Who feels the prize already his own. A man who is prized by the gods. His is the heart where virtues blend. The hark of nation and state. Bring him to me, I'll show you, friend. A type of the really great.
—John S. Gray in Philadelphia Record.

A Hint.

"Is that an eight day clock?" said the young man as the timepiece struck the midnight hour.
"Well," replied the sweet young thing with an unbecoming yawn, "why don't you stay a little longer and find out?"

BY THE TERMS OF A CONTRACT

How a Secret Agreement Was Revealed in Good Time.

A gentleman midway between birth and threescore years and ten sat with a girl of eighteen. He was still young enough to be considered a companion for a young lady. In this case the two had been friends for years. When the girl was a child and he in the twenties she had been accustomed to climb into his lap and hug him. She had got over that. The man was speaking.

"You don't remember your mother, do you?"

"No. You know she died when I was five. But it seems to me I know her from her letters, many of which I have found and have read over and over again."

"Have you come among her papers upon a copy of a contract she made with me some fifteen or sixteen years ago?"

"No. What contract?"

"It was between your mother and me and was to be kept secret."

"Oh!" with a slight toss of her head. "I beg your pardon."

"Some day I may show it to you, but that will depend upon circumstances."

The girl waited for the man to explain, which he failed to do. The conversation dragged, and the man took his departure.

A few weeks later the two were together in the garden.

"You remember, I suppose," said the man, "the contract made years ago between me and your mother that I told you about?"

"And refused to say what it was."

"There are conditions under which I may gratify your curiosity."

"Such as?"

"Well, if you marry, for instance."

"I'm sure my mother could not have entered upon any business agreement with you whereby you were to influence me to marry any particular person."

"Certainly not. I would not think of influencing you in such a matter."

"Then how can my marriage have anything to do with it?"

"Your marriage with any particular person doesn't pertain. I meant that in case you were simply married I might show you the contract."

The girl pondered awhile, then said:

"Is there any one I might marry who would have an interest in this agreement?"

If he could have looked into her eyes he would have seen cunning. Evidently there was something about the subject of their conversation that profoundly interested her. He glanced at her inquiringly, but her head was bent over a flower she was plucking.

"There is one," he said, "who if you married him would have no interest in the agreement."

"You speak in riddles."

A smile hovered about her lips, but she kept her back to him, picking a handful of flowers. When she turned the smile was gone.

"There is my cousin Will," she said. "If I married him, would he have any interest in the agreement?"

"Not after the wedding?"

"But before the wedding?"

"That would depend upon whether he desired a wedding with you."

"Would it depend upon anything else?"

"Yes; upon whether you desired a wedding with him."

"In other words, this contract would interest him (and me) only in case we wished to marry?"

"You have drawn a conclusion not based on proper foundations. In other words, you have perpetrated a fallacy."

"Suppose," she went on after framing another question, "I should marry you. Would you be interested in the contract?"

He started and cast a quick glance at her. Was she starting a hypothetical case for the purpose of trapping him?

"That, I fear—I mean—you would not be likely to marry me."

"But if I should?"

"The contract would be of no moment to me."

"I like this conundrum," she said presently. "The solution is well concealed. Let me see, if I marry you'll tell me the answer. My marriage with any particular person doesn't pertain. There is one I could marry who would have no interest in the agreement. If I married Will it would only interest him if he wished to marry me, and even then it would make no difference. If I married you, you would have no interest in it. What is there to base a guess on?"

"Nevertheless I wish you would guess it."

He spoke ruefully. She cast a glance up at him.

"Suppose I try?"

"You can't guess it."

"I can. The contract is that—here it is."

She pulled out a small paper that had been tucked in her belt and handed it to him. It was a betrothal between her and her companion made for her by her mother when she was a baby.

"I thought you said you had not found it."

"I hadn't. After you told me about it I ransacked all the old desks and cabinets in the house."

"Do you stand by your mother's agreement?"

She threw her arms about his neck.
